

Using Video for Teaching and Training - Intensive Course

This 5 day course combines theoretical and practical elements aimed at raising participants' awareness of the value video can bring to teaching and learning, equipping them with the necessary basic skills to create and share their own educational video materials.

Aimed at enthusiastic newcomers from the teaching and training profession, the course will start with a basic introduction before participants begin group work with a goal of producing their own educational video programme. The course culminates in an open showcase of the videos to an invited audience. Sessions are a mix of theoretical, practical and site visits to ensure an interesting balance of work.

All necessary equipment will be provided. You are welcome to bring your own camera and laptop. A selection of resources, materials and tools to enhance your own creation of educational video resources will be available as well as tips and suggestions about how to use existing video-based resources.

Dates

- 2 - 7 July 2012
- 22 - 27 October 2012
- 11 - 16 March 2013
- 1 - 6 July 2013
- 21 - 26 October 2013

Practical Information

Courses are held at the Leuven Institute for Ireland in Europe. Accommodation is on-site at the Institute. Leuven is 30 km from Brussels with direct connections from Brussels Airport.

Funding is available to cover training and accommodation costs – see overleaf.

Course and materials are in English.

Number of participants is limited to 20.

Learn how to create your own educational video in a week!

Included in the course:

- Scenario and script writing
- Use of sound and light
- Basic video recording and editing skills
- Video publishing
- How to source online lesson materials and sounds
- Visit to a nearby organisation

Feedback from past participants

- “ I really enjoyed the theoretical introduction to use video to support learning, and it was very nice to work together on a video and to get so many web resources that we can use. ”
- “ Working with the group to design and make a video from start to finish was wonderful and really prepared me for doing this in my future teachings. ”
- “ Excellent work, very enriching experience; really makes a difference to me and my work. Carefully planned and great methods for encouraging good group dynamic. ”

Contact the organisers

ATiT

Leuvensesteenweg 132
3370 Roosbeek
Belgium

Tel: +32 16 284040
video-course@atit.be www.atit.be/video-course

Our other initiatives

This course is being run in association with the annual free MEDEA Awards, a competition recognising excellence in the use of media in education. For more information and to view best practice examples, visit the website: www.medea-awards.com

Media & Learning Conference 2012 (two-day event in November in Brussels, Belgium): www.media-and-learning.eu

Media & Learning News: monthly free newsletter in English, bimonthly also in French, German, Italian, Polish and Spanish. Subscribe at: <http://news.media-and-learning.eu>

Courses 'Designing Apps for Teaching and Learning' on 4-9 February 2013 and 'Social Media for European Project Managers' on 18-23 February 2013.

Costs and Funding

The full cost of participation in this weeklong residential course is € 1,400, including accommodation, all meals, tuition and materials as well as guided visits to institutions related to moving images and education.

Funding to cover the full costs of participation including accommodation and flights is available through the Comenius/ Grundtvig programme of the European Commission. The deadline to apply for funding is usually 6 months prior to the course dates, but please check with your national agency.

Information on the steps to apply for funding can be found online: www.atit.be/video-course/funding.

How to apply?

To participate in a course, apply online on www.atit.be/video-course.

The number of participants is limited to 20, funded applicants are guaranteed a place first and then non-funded participants are accepted on a first-come first-served basis.

